The only solution to the problem of excess women in our society is polygamy (esp. for those who are qualified). You can fight it but it's the bitter pill that will save the jummah.

Raising children is very difficult in this day and age, but there are certain things that only make it harder. As parents, we are all tempted to sit our kids in front of the TV or hand them an iPad or get them the latest video game systems. We feel it is our responsibility to entertain our children, but this can take a lot of time and energy. And let's face it: time and energy is always in short supply when you're a parent. So it's easier to let the electronics do the entertaining for us.

But this is a mistake. Numerous studies show that extended exposure to TV, smart phones, electronics, video games for young children causes all kinds of cognitive disadvantages. Even if the content your children consume is 100% clean and wholesome, the impact of a flickering screen is enough to decrease their attention span, decrease their ability to learn new things, decrease their language skills, and much more.

Beyond studies, I have seen this first hand and heard about it from other parents numerous times. Parents bemoan the fact that their kids are addicted to the iPad, the smartphone, the video games. I was shocked to hear that many kids over this past summer vacation were spending over 8 hours a day playing games like Fortnite!

The reality is that developers deliberately design content that is addictive. This makes everything doubly and triply dangerous. It would not be an exaggeration to say that the next generation faces an epidemic of screen addiction because they have had access from pretty much infancy.

If you are a new parent, simply avoid exposing your children to screens. There is no need for there to be a TV in family areas. There is no need to give your toddlers an iPad. Don't let them play with your smartphone if you have one. Maintain a strict no screens for children rule.

As for entertainment, ask yourself: How were all the world's children entertaining themselves before the advent of all these screens? It is not impossible! The first thing to realize is that you are not responsible for entertaining your children 24/7. You are not their personal entertainer. You are only responsible for being their parent and spending quality time with them, but that doesn't mean you have to be entertaining them all day long.

Get your kids used to entertaining themselves. This is a skill all children and, in fact, human beings need. Especially as they get to be 3-4 years old, kids should be able to spend at least some time alone. Reading, playing with toys, drawing, coloring, building with blocks, etc., etc.

The Killing of a Believer

It was narrated from Bara' bin Azib (رضي الله عنه) that

The Messenger of Allāh (ﷺ) said:

"If this world were to be destroyed, that would be less significant before Allāh than the unlawful killing of a believer."

Commentary: A true believer is very dear to Allāh (ﷻ). Usually the cause of murder is some wordly gain. One should not kill a believer for a small wordly gain because the life of the believer is more precious than all the wordly treasures of the world to Allāh (ﷻ).

Shaykh Sulayman ar-Ruhaylee:

A man from the believers, a person of Tawheed, will be brought forth on the Day of Judgment. It will be said:

"Present to him his minor sins and conceal from him his major sins. Thus it will be said to him: On this day you did such and such, and this and that. And he will affirm that and he will not deny it. And he will be afraid lest his major sins be presented."

His minor actions will be presented to him, his minor sins. On this day you did such and such, and this and that. And he will affirm that and he will not deny these sins. But his heart will be terrified that his major sins will be mentioned; full of fear from his major sins.

"It will be said: Give him in place of every sin he did; a good deed."

It will be said: Give him in place of every sin he did; a good deed. Allah will pardon his sins and honour him by replacing them with good deeds.

"Thus he will say: Verily I have sins which I do not see!"

After he had been terrified that his major sins would be mentioned, he began to hope they would be mentioned so they would be replaced with good deeds.

So when the Prophet ( ﷺ ) mentioned that: He smiled until his molar teeth became visible.

This was due to the situation of this man. He was terrified, petrified, frightened that his major sins would be mentioned. But when he saw the generosity of Allah, he desired them, so he started to look for them. He said: 'Verily I have sins which I do not see.' Meaning: the major sins which were concealed from him. He said this so his major sins could be exchanged for good deeds. So the Prophet ( ﷺ ) smiled about that until his molar teeth became visible.

This hadith has been collected by Imaam Ahmad in his Musnad. And it has been declared authentic by Al Albani.

The emptiest of houses

Click on this picture to visit site

Ibn Mas'ood I[ ]I said:

“The emptiest of houses are those which are empty (free) from the (recitation of the) Book of Allāh.”

[Musannaf Ibn Abee Shaibah (30024)]

Shaikh Abdul Razzaaq al-Badr said:

“Meaning: the houses with the least good and blessings in them are those houses in which the Book of Allāh is rarely recited. This effaces the blessing from the house, and motivates (invites) the Shayaateen towards it.”

Abū Hurairah I[ ]I used to say:

“The house - which is expanded for its inhabitants (even if it's small in size), and which is visited by the Angels, and from which the Shayaateen flee, and whose goodness is increased - is the one in which the Qur'ān is recited.

And the house - which is constricted for its inhabitants (irrespective of its big size), and from which the Angels flee, and which is visited by the Shayaateen, and whose goodness is decreased - is the one in which the Qur'ān is not recited.”

[Sunan al-Dārimī (3309)].

LEARN FROM LIBYA AND SYRIA

I schooled in pre-revolt Libya. I'm in touch with post-revolt Libya. In old Libya, education, qualitative medical care and European standard housing were unbelievably free for citizens among countless other social benefits too good to be true.

Today, if queuing for cooking gas, endless fighting and the emergence of tribal militias, general insecurity and slave trade, among other once unimaginable woes of Libya are not a sufficient scorecard of the revolt that killed the erstwhile Libyan leader, then hear this: Recently, I was revulsed terribly in a social media group comprising me and some hundreds of old Libyan friends when a member posted the picture of a nude woman to illustrate a story. This was once unimaginable in Libya. In fact, foreign magazines that contained such obscene images could not enter the country or if they did, special govt agencies blotted them out with dark ink before the magazines could circulate.

If posting that obscenity was bad enough, that only me was offended by it in the group was certainly worse, and that the picture still stands there to this moment tells you the kind of freedom the revolters fought to gain, but they called it jihad while it lasted, just as misguided organisations that have made revolts against Muslim rulers the essence of the deen say to our youths today.

If this is the result in Libya where the revolters won the the fight, go to the ghettos and streets of Europe - sorry, I mean Syria - where the revolters lost the fight, then you'll understand why we must not entrust Muslim youths into the hands of organizations and individuals whose only plan for them is clandestine meetings to teach them how to bring down their rulers.

It starts with demonizing those rulers and turning the youths against all pious scholars that may remind them we have a teacher in the Messenger and examples in the companions on how to relate with Muslim rulers. Beware!
